Dr Sebastian Brown

BVSc (Hons II) MBBS (Hons I) FRANZCO

Dr Sebastian Brown is a comprehensive general ophthalmologist with special interests in cataract surgery, pterygium surgery, glaucoma and medical retina conditions.

BACKGROUND

After completing his Bachelor of Veterinary Science, Dr Brown obtained his medical degree at the University of Sydney, graduating in 2012 with a Bachelor of Medicine and Bachelor of Surgery (First Class Honours). During this time, Dr Brown was awarded The Royal North Shore Medal for academic excellence.

Dr Brown undertook specialist ophthalmology training with the Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Ophthalmologists (RANZCO), completed through The Sydney Eye Hospital network. He also trained in numerous hospital settings across New South Wales, Darwin and Hobart. Collectively, these experiences provided extensive exposure to all facets of ophthalmology. Following this, Dr Brown completed a comprehensive general fellowship at the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital and Liverpool Hospital. He currently holds public appointments at the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital and Bankstown-Lidcombe Hospital.

Dr Brown has also pursued an interest in medical research, with work published in numerous prestigious journals. In addition to his ophthalmology practice, Dr Brown values fostering the development of junior doctors and other healthcare staff. He has held clinical teaching roles at several prominent institutions, including Sydney Medical School, Sydney Eye Hospital, the Royal Victorian Ear and Eye Hospital, Prince of Wales Hospital, the University of Sydney and the Royal North Shore Hospital.

In his spare time, Dr Brown enjoys travelling, surfing, swimming and cycling. He is also a kite-surfing enthusiast, and he speaks Spanish.
